

SEATTLE STREETCAR

Center City Connector

Thanks for your interest in the Center City Connector Streetcar project! In this email, you'll find updates on relocating load zones, utility construction in Pioneer Square, and ongoing outreach.

Relocating load zones

We've been meeting with businesses and property owners along the Center City Connector alignment to determine where we can replace loading that will be removed for the project. Our goal is to replace all load zones 1 for 1 within 1 block of their current locations.

You may notice crews in Pioneer Square reviewing the new load zone locations and marking the street. They are prepping for load zone changes which will take effect about 1 month before water and sewer main construction starts this fall.

Utility construction progress in Pioneer Square

Before the Center City Connector Streetcar track construction can begin, several utilities must be relocated and replaced along the future streetcar route. This work will provide more reliable and resilient utilities for customers and allow better access to those utilities after the streetcar tracks are built.

What's happening now?

Puget Sound Energy (PSE) is relocating segments of natural gas pipeline along 1st Ave S and S Jackson St, as well as replacing and relocating 4 service regulators along 1st Ave S. Construction began in June and they expect to continue through September. Crews are currently working along S Jackson St and natural gas relocation work along 1st Ave S should begin in July.

What will the rest of the utility construction be like?

Check out our construction folio detailing what to expect during the first phase of utility construction, focused in Pioneer Square.

Construction workshop with project neighbors

Ongoing outreach

Our project team is working hard to inform neighbors about upcoming utility construction and gather input as we approach final streetcar design. During the month of June, we held 20 briefings and meetings with project neighbors.

Do you live or work along the Center City Connector streetcar alignment and would like to schedule a briefing about the project for your group? Please email centercitystreetcar@seattle.gov.
